International Meeting on Behavioral and Experimental Economics

Córdoba (Spain), December 09-12, 2004

Call for Papers

The meeting intends to promote research on behavioral and experimental economics and it includes a limited number of special sessions by key researchers on the topic. The list of invited speakers includes, among others, Prof. Werner Güth (Max Planck Institute), Prof. Andrew Schotter (New York University), Prof. Timothy Cason (Purdue University), Prof. Charles Noussair (Emory University) and Prof. Franz van Winden (CREED).

A combination of invited and contributed papers will be chosen for the final program. Proposals for contributed papers are invited in the form of an extended abstract and should be submitted by October 15 to the organizers at fatas@uv.es. Both theoretical and empirical papers on the topics of experimental and behavioural economics are encouraged. Also interdisciplinary papers involving economics and psychology or sociology are welcome. Authors will receive notification of acceptance by October 31st. Accepted papers will be grouped in the afternoon sessions. Every session will comprise from two to four papers with discussants.

The conference venue is the IESA center, a XVI century building located very close to the old medieval town of Córdoba. The local organizing committee includes Rafael Serrano (IESA-CSIC, Chair), Javier Rodero (CentrA), Esperanza Vera (IESA-CSIC), Victoria Ateca (IESA-CSIC) and Luis M. Miller (secretary, IESA-CSIC).

There are no registration fees. A limited number of rooms in the conference hotel (Hotel Tryp - Los Gallos) have been reserved for attendants at 61 € per night (breakfast and taxes included. Please contact the organizers at lmmiller@iesaa.csic.es before October 31st if you are willing to apply for one of these rooms. Note that we cannot warrant an accommodation there for all the participants, so rooms will be served on a first come basis. Information on budget accommodation is available upon request.
